

The Boundaries of American Belonging

This class is about windows and mirrors. Yes, windows and mirrors.

Of course, we will explore the history of the modern United States, beginning in 1877 and moving toward the present day. In particular, we will be concerned with the boundaries of belonging. Who is accepted as an American? Who is able to enjoy the rights and privileges of American citizenship? How does American identity expand or contract over time?

To aid our exploration, we will use sport and recreation as our window to the past. The boundaries of sport, meaning who is or is not able to access the playing field, often parallel the boundaries of belonging. Therefore, thinking critically about athletes and athletic events allow us also to think critically about American history more broadly. And critical thinking, more than memorizing names, dates, and places, is the most important takeaway for this class. Regardless of whether or not you are a “history person,” the study of history encourages you to carefully analyze information, preparing you to succeed in your intended field of study. This is where the mirrors come in. It is important to be reflexive about the study of history. We not only want to analyze information, but also to reflect on why we (as a society and as an individual) think about history the way that we do.

Through this process, we will meet MTSU’s General Education Learning Outcomes:

- Analyze historical facts and interpretations.
- Analyze and compare political, geographic, economic, social, cultural, religious, and intellectual institutions, structures, and processes across a range of historical periods and cultures.
- Recognize and articulate the diversity of human experience across a range of historical periods and the complexities of a global culture and society.
- Draw on historical perspective to evaluate contemporary problems/issues.
- Analyze the contributions of past cultures/societies to the contemporary world.

In sum, applying the ideas of windows and mirrors to the study of history will make this class relevant to you, helping you to think critically and carefully and, in turn, succeed on your chosen academic and/or career paths.

In almost all class periods, we will be actively using technology. You are encouraged to bring a laptop or tablet. A smart phone will also suffice.

In this class, you are expected strictly to abide by MTSU's Academic Integrity and Misconduct guidelines:

Academic integrity is a hallmark of Middle Tennessee State University. We expect students to complete academic exercises, i.e., assignments turned in for credit, that are original and appropriately credit all sources used. Academic misconduct includes, but is not limited to:

1. Plagiarism: The adoption or reproduction of ideas, words, statements, images, or works of another person as one's own without proper attribution. This includes self-plagiarism, which occurs when an author submits material or research from a previous academic exercise to satisfy the requirements of another exercise and uses it without proper citation of its reuse.
2. Cheating: Using or attempting to use unauthorized materials, information, or study aids in any academic exercise. This includes unapproved collaboration, which occurs when a student works with others on an academic exercise without the express permission of the professor. It also includes purchasing assignments or paying another person to complete a course for you.
3. Fabrication: Unauthorized falsification or invention of any information or citation in an academic exercise.

Going online and using information without proper citation, copying parts of other students' work, creating information to establish credibility, or using someone else's thoughts or ideas without appropriate acknowledgment is academic misconduct. The instructor has the authority to assign an "F" or zero for an activity or to assign an "F" for the course. Students guilty of plagiarism will be immediately reported to the Director of Student Academic Ethics.

Please see the following statement about learning accommodations:

In Dr. Ariail's HIST 2020 class, we will use Slack to communicate and collaborate, both inside and outside the classroom. Why Slack? Slack is the leading workplace collaboration software. Regardless of your future career, collaborating and communicating online will be important. Slack also allows you to share your work and ideas with others, just as you will do in your future career. Using Slack in history class can serve as career prep and practice. So, make sure you have access to our class's Slack Workspace and are comfortable using the website or app on your computer or phone. Below, you'll find a description of our Slack channels and the purposes they will serve.

#schedule

This channel will include an updated link to the syllabus and schedule. Any changes to the syllabus or schedule will be posted here. Reminders or announcements about upcoming assignments will also be posted to this channel. Changes to the syllabus and schedule also will be communicated on this channel.

#assignments

Links to readings and other materials will be posted on this channel. Information about upcoming papers, exams, and other assignments will also be posted on this channel. This channel also can be used to ask questions about assignments.

#classroom

This channel will host our Slack Sessions. Every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday by 6 AM, Dr. Ariail will post questions, prompts, quizzes, polls, and other tasks related to that day's assignment. To receive credit, you are expected to contribute to our "conversation" by 6 AM the following morning.

#americanyawp

This is the channel where you will post your American Yawp (AY) Response Questions. You should post them by 12 noon on the respective date, usually Mondays.

#contestedwaters

Any work related to Contested Waters (CW Work) will be posted to this channel. Response questions or response papers should be posted by 12 noon on the respective due date, usually Fridays.

#notes

If there are any important documents related to the material covered in class, including guided notes, I will post them to this channel. More importantly, you are also encouraged to use this channel to collaborate with other students by creating or sharing notes and study guides.

Dr. Ariail's Slack hours are 6 a.m. to 6 p.m. This does not mean that I always am available during this time frame, although I will do my best to respond as promptly as possible. It does mean that you should not expect responses from me outside of these hours. While we want to use Slack to continue class conversations, we do not want this conversation to be constant. It is healthy to take a break from history class!
